VOID011: REALICIDE THE CHOICE IS YOURS 12" EP

A collaborative experiment with hard broken beat imprint Void Tactical Media in Detroit, "The Choice Is Yours" is the first Realicide EP designed with an ear toward creative DJ use. This record breaks away from the saturated montage of mangled speedcore anxiety found on other Realicide releases, favoring 4 longer, more straight-forward bastardized gabber punk anthems which largely serve as extended sequels to songs originally found on the: "Resisting The Viral Self" LP earlier in 2009. The title track is an elaboration on the 2008 song "Autonomy", created by Robert Inhuman, Evolve, and Jim Swill. A2 "The Passive Observer" is an elaboration on the 2007 song, "The Audience Sucks", with one of the absolute best Vankmen gabber beats backing Inhuman and Swill. B1 track "No War Can Be Won" is a Crass-inspired remix combining elements of previous songs "Neutralizing Opiate", "Autonomy", and "Xenophobic HxC". And B2 is a sequel to Mavis Concave's electribe anthem "Open Eyes", with extended lyrics by Inhuman and Swill. Overtly combative yet urgently outreaching, Realicide represents a minority contingent of electronic-driven punx in 21st century America, progressing a personalized vision apart from any dogmatic precedents established in hardcore. Screenprinted covers + insert posters. 1st Edition: 300, October 2009.

REVIEWS

"The message is everything here and Realicide have plenty to say. But it's not the cheesy DHR "start the riot motherfuckerzzzzz" kind of message that you might expect".
